Prosecutors will seek the death penalty for Robert Bowers, the deranged gunman behind what is believed to be the nation's deadliest attack on Jews ever. Bowers killed 11 Jews worshipping at synagogue and wounded six people including four cops. Funerals concluded Wednesday as Pittsburgh mourns the dead following a shooting that has sparked intense debate nationwide over whether political rhetoric inspired the violence. WHITEY'S DEATH BEING PROBED AS HOMICIDE

1 Prosecutors are investigating Boston gangster James "Whitey" Bulger's death as a homicide, officials said on Wednesday, a day after his bloodied body was discovered at a West Virginia federal prison. "The United States Attorney's Office and the FBI are investigating the death of James Bulger as a homicide," the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of West Virginia said in a statement. The office declined to provide further details. Bulger, 89, had lived a double life as one of Boston's most notorious mobsters and as a secret Federal Bureau of Investigation informant before going on the run for 16 years. Bulger had been transferred a day earlier in a wheelchair to the high-security Hazelton penitentiary in West Virginia, a prison employee briefed on the matter said on Tuesday. Two men were seen on surveillance footage entering Bulger's cell, the prison employee said. Bulger's body was later discovered wrapped in a sheet, the employee said, and had been beaten so badly that blood had come out of his ears.

OPRAH ENDORSES ABRAMS FOR GEORGIA GOVERNOR

2 Oprah Winfrey plans to lend her star power to Georgia Democrat Stacey Abrams' quest to become the nation's first black female governor at a couple of appearances in the state on Thursday. After a brief flirtation earlier this year with a run for the White House in 2020, the media mogul, who has long associated herself with Democratic Party causes, has instead thrown her influence into a race that has become a flash point for accusations of voter suppression. Abrams' Republican rival, Brian Kemp, serves as Georgia secretary of state. Earlier this month, a coalition of state civil rights groups sued Kemp, accusing him of trying to depress minority voter turnout to improve his chances of winning. On Monday, former President and former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter asked Kemp to step down as secretary of state since he was running for governor. Abrams' campaign said she would appear with Winfrey in Cobb and DeKalb counties for a discussion on "the critical value of women in leadership and what is at stake for our communities in the election."

THOUSANDS OF HONDURANS IN MIGRANT CARAVAN CONTINUE MARCH THROUGH MEXICO

3 Members of the Central American caravan wake up at dawn in a camp on Wednesday in Juchitan de Zaragoza, Mexico. The group of migrants, many of them fleeing violence in their home countries, took a rest day on Wednesday and planned to resume their march toward the United States border on Wednesday. As fatigue from the heat, distance and poor sanitary conditions has set in, the number of people participating in the march has slowly dwindled, but a significant group are still determined to get to the United States. It has been widely reported that the Pentagon will deploy 5,200 active-duty troops to the U.S.-Mexico border in an effort to prevent members of the migrant caravan from illegally entering the country.

TRUMP HARDENS STANCE ON MEXICO BORDER

4 President Donald Trump said on Wednesday the United States could send as many as 15,000 troops to the border with Mexico, as he hardens his stance against a caravan of migrants fleeing violence and poverty in Central America. The numbers cited by Trump are significantly higher than defense officials have disclosed. The Pentagon said on Monday it was deploying more than 5,200 troops to the border but that the number would rise. On Wednesday, it said more than 7,000 troops would support the Department of Homeland Security along the border. Several groups, including the American Civil Liberties Union, have accused Trump of politicizing the military ahead of next week's congressional elections with his plans to use active military personnel to buttress border patrol efforts. "As far as the caravan is concerned, our military is out. ... We'll go up to anywhere between 10,000 and 15,000 military personnel, on top of Border Patrol, ICE and everybody else at the border," Trump told reporters at the White House. Trump did not say how many of those 15,000 would be National Guard.

RARE NATO-RUSSIA TALKS ADDRESS MILITARY DRILLS

5 NATO and Russia envoys on Wednesday discussed their respective large-scale military exercises and a Cold War-era missile treaty that Washington vows to quit over accusations of Russian non-compliance, the Western alliance said. The talks, the first between the former Cold War foes since May, came against a backdrop of renewed tensions between the West and Russia, most notably over Moscow's 2014 annexation of Crimea and involvement in eastern Ukraine. A NATO statement said the sides had an "open exchange" of views on Ukraine, Russia's Vostok military exercises and NATO's ongoing Trident Juncture drills, as well as on Afghanistan and hybrid security threats. NATO this month launched its largest exercises since the Cold War in Norway, whose non-NATO Nordic neighbors Sweden and Finland have drawn closer to the alliance since being spooked by Russia's role in the turmoil in Ukraine. NATO troops are maneuvering close to the borders of Russia, which held its huge annual Vostok military drill in September. The two are regularly irked by each other's exercises, where a show of force and deterrence play a major role.

New charges filed as Pittsburgh buries three more shooting victims

Robert Bowers was indicted on 44 counts by a grand jury.

Federal prosecutors added more charges, including religious hate crimes, against the man accused of killing 11 Jews in a Pittsburgh synagogue, according to an indictment filed on Wednesday, as the city held funerals for three more victims.

"Today begins the process of seeking justice for the victims of these hateful acts," U.S. Attorney Scott Brady said in a statement, adding that his office "will spare no resource" to do so.

Eleven worshippers were gunned down on Saturday morning by a man who stormed into the Tree of Life synagogue and opened fire, yelling anti-Semitic statements including "All Jews must die."

The attack, believed to be the deadliest against Jews in the United States in recent history, has fueled a fierce political debate about white nationalism and anti-Semitism ahead of hotly contested U.S. congressional elections next week.

Mourners gathered for the funerals of Melvin Wax, 88, who was leading Sabbath services when the attack began; retired real estate agent Irving Younger, 69; and retired university researcher Joyce Fienberg, 75.

The after-effects of the tragedy still pervaded life on Wednesday in the Squirrel Hill neighborhood where the synagogue is located.

In coffee shops, customers talked about the victims they knew, remembering them as civic-minded, kind and pillars of the community.

In the street, friends embraced and comforted one another during the period of raw grief.

Libby Zal said that Younger was such a fixture in Squirrel Hill that a local store he frequented would send him a "get well" card if he did not appear after three days.

Dan Frankel, a Democratic member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, called Younger outgoing and opinionated.

"Today begins the process of seeking justice for the victims of these hateful acts."

Scott Brady, U.S. attorney

"He was very interested in social justice and he probably would not have wanted the death penalty [for the gunman]," he said.

A grand jury voted to indict Bowers on 44 counts, according to a filing in federal court in Pittsburgh. He had faced 29 counts. The new charges included 11 counts of obstruction of free exercise of religious beliefs resulting in death, and various charges related to his use of a gun in anti-religious violence.

Prosecutors have said they will seek the death penalty.

The synagogue attack has heightened a national debate over President Donald Trump's rhetoric, which critics say has contributed to a surge in white-nationalist and neo-Nazi activity. His administration denies he has encouraged far-right extremism and is instead attempting to unify America. REUTERS

Philly state rep. convicted in controversial bribery 'sting'

State Rep. Vanessa Lowery Brown is seen in footage recorded by an undercover operative. COURTESY OF PHILLY DA'S OFFICE

Years after a botched corruption sting, state legislator Vanessa Brown is convicted by a jury.

Four years after a controversial undercover sting of corruption in Harrisburg was revealed, Democratic Philly State Rep. Vanessa Lowery Brown, one of the six officials implicated in the scandal, was convicted on Thursday by a jury of bribery.

Brown accepted $4,000 in gifts in 2011 from an undercover operative who undertook a "sting" of various officials at the direction of state prosecutors.

Brown, 52, who won the 2018 primary to represent the 190th District despite the charges and was set to run in the November general election, reportedly wept after the verdict was announced, the Patriot-News reported.

The case emerged from a complicated and controversial undercover sting and has a long history freighted with ironies, littered with rampant corruption, destroyed careers and handled by two separate elected prosecutors who were separately convicted in their own criminal cases.

Brown's verdict represents the first conviction at trial related to the sting. She could face prison time or probation at sentencing, but will certainly be barred from running for state office and lose her pension.

The other five defendants all plead guilty or no contest, paying fines and leaving office but keeping their pensions, except Thomasine Tynes, who was also convicted of charges related to the Philly Traffic Court scandal.

It was back in 2014 that a Philadelphia Inquirer investigation first revealed that Democratic Attorney General Kathleen Kane had discarded the results of an undercover sting that was undertaken by her predecessor, the Republican former AG and then-Gov. Tom Corbett.

In Corbett's sting, undercover operative Tyron Ali had secretly recorded at least 113 encounters with state lawmakers over the course of 2011 and 2012. Only six accepted illegally unreported cash or gifts. But after taking office, Kane refused to pursue the sting further, and reportedly claimed the sting only targeted black Democrats.

After the reports emerged, former Philly DA Seth Williams, who had employed some of the investigators who worked on the sting and denied any evidence of racial targeting in the case, took over the investigation from Kane and went on to file criminal charges against all six individuals implicated in the sting: Brown, Tynes and former state Reps. Louise Bishop, Ronald Waters, Michelle Brownlee and Harold James.

Ironically, while none of the politicians implicated in the sting accepted more than $5,000, Ali himself was flipped to serve as an informant to dodge charges that he stole roughly $430,000 from a Meals on Wheels program he operated. And none of the bribes were for any concrete quid-pro-quos, just general influence, and in some cases, Democrats were recorded agreeing to support Democratic legislation.

Kane was so outraged by the Inquirer leak that she leaked grand jury documents establishing she had investigated the Philly NAACP's former director to purportedly prove she was serious about corruption. She was later convicted of lying about the leak and sentenced to 10 months in prison. (She remains free on house arrest pending appeal.)

Williams is currently serving five years in federal prison after he pleaded guilty to corruption charges, in part for accepting more than $160,000 in unreported gifts. SAM NEWHOUSE

Philly cop to be fired for 2017 fatal shooting of unarmed man

Philly Police Commissioner Richard Ross said Officer Eric Ruch will be fired for violating departmental policy when he killed Dennis Plowden.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Ten months after a Philly plainclothes police officer fatally shot an unarmed black man who had just fled officers and crashed a vehicle that was sought in relation to a homicide investigation, the department announced that he will be fired for violating departmental policies during the shooting.

Officer Eric Ruch Jr., 30, a 10-year veteran assigned to the 35th District, will be suspended for 30 days with intent to dismiss for the shooting of 25-year-old Dennis Plowden on Dec. 27, 2017, in North Philly, who was unarmed at the time and is not believed to have had any link to the homicide in question. Three other cops on the scene did not fire.

"Someone lost their life in this situation. These are difficult decisions that we make, we don't take them lightly," said Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross during a press conference on Wednesday. "The other officers did not fire. No one ever saw Mr. Plowden with a weapon."

Ross said Ruch believed Plowden was armed and fired once, killing Plowden as he sat on the curb after stumbling out of the car in which he had just sped away from two police vehicles and crashed into two parked cars.

Ruch violated the Philadelphia Police Department police code stating that an "officer shall not use deadly force against another person unless they have an objectively reasonable belief that they must protect themselves or another person from death or serious bodily injury."

Some packets of heroin were found in the car and on Plowden but the victim was wanted for a "scoff-law warrant" for tickets, Ross said. No weapon was found on him or in the car.

The shooting remains under investigation by Philly DA Larry Krasner.

"The incident is the subject of an ongoing and active investigation by our office," a spokesman for the DA's office said via email.

Giuliani made secret trips to Russia, Ukraine, Armenia: Report

It's not clear if these were paid trips by Trump's lawyer.

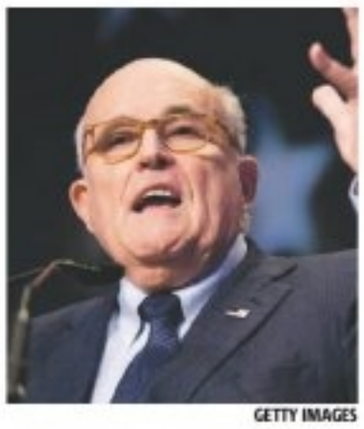
letters@metro.us



GETTY IMAGES

Rudy Giuliani, President Trump's lawyer and longtime adviser, has made trips to Russia, Ukraine and Armenia that have increased in frequency since Trump's election and haven't been fully explained, a new report says.

According to WNYC, the former New York City mayor has frequently traveled to Russia and other former Soviet states as a guest of powerful people there. The most recent trip was last week, when Giuliani appeared in the former Soviet Republic of Armenia. The local press reported he was invited by Ara Abramyan, an Armenian businessman living in Russia who helped reconstruct the Kremlin and received a medal for "merit to the fatherland" from Russian President Vladimir Putin.

"Giuliani said he was in Armenia as a private citizen, but on a local TV news show, Abramyan implied that he expected Giuliani to carry a message for him to Trump," WNYC reported, noting that the conversation was in Armenian, so it's possible Giuliani didn't understand what Abramyan was saying.

It's unclear if Giuliani is being paid to go on the trips, and by whom. Giuliani hasn't commented.

Although Giuliani's trips haven't broken any laws, they are — like so much of the Trump administration's foreign policy — unprecedented. Former U.S. Attorney Barbara McQuade told WNYC, "I don't recall seeing anything like this before."

Giuliani was brought aboard Trump's legal team earlier this year, reportedly to run defense on TV against special counsel Robert Mueller's Russia investigation, which has resulted in felony charges for people close to the president. But after a well-publicized series of gaffes — some of which involved Giuliani contradicting his own client — the former mayor has been out of the spotlight.

For months, Giuliani has given conflicting signals about whether Trump will testify before Mueller, in what form — written or in person — and under what parameters.

What's driving voters to the polls?

The 2018 midterm elections are expected to have the highest participation rate in decades.

ANNA HARSTEDT
letters@metro.us

GETTY IMAGES

With less than one week to go before the midterm elections, voter enthusiasm is at its highest level during any midterm in more than two decades.

According to a recent study by University of Florida Professor Michael McDonald, 45 to 50 percent of eligible voters will participate in this year's midterm elections. Such a high number of voter participation hasn't been seen since 1966, when a record 49 percent voted in a midterm.

So, what's driving voters to the polls? A host of issues including controversial comments made by President Donald Trump on topics like the global economy, national security, women's rights, and immigration have polarized both Democrats and Republicans in this year's election.

Both Republicans and Democrats have hyped the importance of the midterm elections, with President Donald Trump saying it "may be the most important midterm election that anybody can remember."

A recent study by Pew Research Center found that the increase was greater on the Democratic side. Around 55 percent of people between the ages of 18 to 29 are expected to vote, with gun laws considered to be one of the most important questions, according to a poll by NBC News.

"More than ever, young voters have shown they are ready to stand up and be heard," Institute of Politics Director Mark Gearan said in a statement.

WE SHOULD OUTLAW BACKPACKS ON TRAINS

Of course you are entitled to carry your backpack on the subway. But the important question is, DO YOU REMOVE IT before entering the train? Some of the backpacks are huge and take up space equal to a commuter! Now, if there are a lot of these inconsiderate people, then the rest of the commuters suffer. This brings me to another complaint I have: What about placing those useless platform controllers on the subway to monitor? Apply a law that commuters who don't remove their backpack will be fined, then enforce said law. Just saying.

Diane Lane on the 'strange and miraculous' story of 'House of Cards' season 6

Diane Lane and Robin Wright square off in the final season of "House of Cards."

The actress also opens up about wading into the world of television.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

Diane Lane thinks it's "rather strange and miraculous that season 5 ended the way it did," not just because of what happened behind the scenes of "House of Cards" with Kevin Spacey's firing, but also in regards to what's happening in actual American politics right now.

Fans of the show already know what Lane is talking about, but for those of you who don't, here's a quick recap: President Claire Underwood (Robin Wright) has been sworn in following her husband Frank's (Spacey) resignation. He attempts to control the situation behind the scenes and calls her at the White House, but Claire refuses him, turns to the camera and declares, "My turn."

Now that Frank has been killed off and Claire is in office, the upcoming sixth and final season will see her squaring off with Lane and Greg Kinnear as the wealthy Shepherd siblings Annette and Bill.

"It really teed up the opportunity for [showrunners Melissa James Gibson and Frank Pugliese] to be afforded the opportunity to revisit, reexamine and rewrite the last season," Lane tells Metro. "Because our hair was caught in the machine of the zeitgeist, and it forced the show to pause and reconvene. I think it's so lucky, what this show will wind up

"I just think it's really miraculous because had it been a few months later, I don't know what would have happened. We were all on standby," she continues. "But Netflix did the right thing by taking care of the crew and the hundreds of other employees in the meantime. I'm not 100 percent sure what some other house would have done with its people in this situation."

While the showrunners and writers' attempted to cover up the Spacey-sized hole with Lane and Kinnear's hiring, story-wise the Shepherds' grand entrance into the plot provides ample explanation for itself. The writing should obviously be credited, but so too should the actors, especially Lane. Whereas Kinnear's Bill is more of an obvious patriarch who knows how to throw his weight around, Annette is as cunning and capable as Claire.

"When a family has all this money and implied power, what are they doing with it? What can they do with it? Certainly, it's not unrealistic to think about these questions in terms of this country's history, politically," Lane says of the Shepherds. "I thought that Annette was coming to this from a perspective of comfort with her entitled experience and power. And we see it play out more and more throughout these eight episodes."

But what drew Lane to "House of Cards," specifically, and the wider world of television? Though known primarily for her many film roles, the actress has recently begun diving into TV with her "House of Cards" role, a part in "Mad Men" creator Matthew Weiner's cinematic "The Romanoffs" on Amazon, and FX's upcoming adaptation of the acclaimed graphic novel "Y: The Last Man."

"I just think it's good to go where the doors are opening for you, you know?" she explains. "There is a lot more available there, as far as the writing that's of interest to me. I think it explores women's experiences and perspectives more deeply."

The sixth and final season of "House of Cards" streams Friday on Netflix.

Rams stay atop NFL Week 9 Power Rankings

Metro ranks the top 10 teams in the league.

LUKE MILLER
sports@metro.us

1. L.A. RAMS (8-0)
LAST WEEK: 1

The Packers gave the Rams their toughest test yet, but the NFL's last undefeated team emerged unscathed. They came back from a 10-0 deficit early and a 27-26 deficit late, much of it again thanks to the running (and receiving) of superstar Todd Gurley. He has 180 more rushing yards and five more touchdowns than any other player in the league through eight games.

2. N.E. PATRIOTS (6-2)
LAST WEEK: 2

A tougher opponent than the Bills might have made the Patriots pay for settling for field goals on so many trips to the red zone Monday night. The Packers will present a tougher test, and make Rob Gronkowski's status one to watch this week.

3. K.C. CHIEFS (7-1)
LAST WEEK: 3

Patrick Mahomes had his fifth four-touchdown game of 2018 and seventh straight 300-yard effort. This win completed a season sweep of the rival Broncos for Kansas City with the season only half over, and Cleveland looks an unlikely Week 9 opponent to slow the Chiefs down.

4. N.O. SAINTS (6-1)
LAST WEEK: 4

The Saints won the "Miracle" rematch despite being held to 270 total yards and 164 passing yards. Winning even when everything isn't clicking might be necessary again in Week 9. The Saints don't have any time to revel in this victory before launching into another huge conference matchup against the undefeated Rams.

5. PIT. STEELERS (4-2-1)
LAST WEEK: 6

A grieving city pulled out a victory on Sunday, largely behind the rushing of homegrown talent James Connor. The speculated return of Le'Veon Bell post-bye week didn't happen. No big deal for the Steelers, who have the NFL's third-ranked rusher in Connor. He had 212 total yards and two touchdowns Sunday, his third straight 100-yard day on the ground.

6. L.A. CHARGERS (5-2)
LAST WEEK: 7

The Chargers are one of the hottest teams in the league but face a tough test against the resurgent Seahawks in Seattle. Hopefully, a bye week provided a chance for the Chargers to get healthier — specifically stars Joey Bosa and Melvin Gordon.

7. WASHINGTON (5-2)
LAST WEEK: 9

Adrian Peterson and Washington appear to have been the perfect match. The running back is revitalized with 345 yards rushing in the past three games, all victories. The best Washington rushing attack in years is matched only by their defense, which just sacked Eli Manning (admittedly, not the NFL's toughest feat) seven times.

8. CAR. PANTHERS (5-2)
LAST WEEK: 8

With Torrey Smith sidelined, D.J. Moore may have just turned in his breakout performance. The rookie wide receiver had 90 yards receiving and ran for another 39 on the ground. Cam Newton had three total touchdowns and no turnovers, and the Panthers continued to separate themselves from the trailing teams in the NFC South.

9. HOU. TEXANS (5-3)
LAST WEEK: 10

Deshaun Watson threw five touchdown passes and Lamar Miller posted 133 rushing yards against his former team. Demaryius Thomas' last-minute arrival will help in the wake of Will Fuller's torn ACL.

10. MIN. VIKINGS (4-3-1)
LAST WEEK: 5

Another game for the Vikings where the passing attack took center stage, and this time Stefon Diggs joined Adam Thielen in the 100-yard column. Thielen's game tied Calvin Johnson's NFL record of eight straight 100-yard receiving performances. The Vikings have an important divisional game against Detroit this week before going on bye.
